51. Read the passage below which appeared on New Vision and in Full sentences answer the questions that follow.

Food can be kept in the kitchen, either in a cupboard or on shelves. Sometimes, another room, called a food store, is also used to keep food. There must be away fro air to move around the food, because proper ventilation is important for good storage. The air carries away the smell of the food and helps to keep it at the correct temperature. Good ventilation therefore, keeps food cool. Many fruits would soon get spoiled in a warm place. Food with fats and oil like a cool storage area. If your store is also dry, it will protect your food from moulds and our tins from rusting.

Lastly, keep your storage area clean. Wash shelves, cupboard and floors often. Paint or spread clean paper on shelves. Clean the walls and paint them. A clean storage area will help to keep away insects and mice. A clean well ventilated, cool, dry store means better food for you and me.
